Price Accepts RSC Chairmanship

Vows to Offer a Clear Conservative Choice for Americans

Washington, DC – Representative Tom Price, M.D. (GA-06) issued the following statement today upon accepting the chairmanship of the House Republican Study Committee for the 111th Congress. The RSC, with over one hundred members, is the conservative caucus of the House GOP. Chairman Price succeeds outgoing Chairman Jeb Hensarling (TX-05).

“With our nation facing unprecedented challenges, we embark today on a mission to restore the opportunities, principles, and prosperity which we value as a nation.” said Chairman Price. “It is an honor and a privilege to accept the torch passed on by Chairman Hensarling, whose devotion to conservative principles will make our opportunities for resurgence possible.

“Hard-working Americans are looking for strong leadership that will offer sensible and effective solutions for their lives. With complete liberal control of government, we are now presented both with an opportunity and an obligation to provide the American people with a clear, positive, conservative alternative to an irresponsible tax-hiking, ‘big government’ agenda. Building upon its great tradition, the Republican Study Committee will serve as a springboard for bold ideas and an instrument to hold accountable our erstwhile colleagues.

“Working as a team, the membership of the RSC will stand up for the values and ideas that will allow freedom to flourish and lead us out of economic despair. It is with great optimism that I look forward to leading this charge as Republicans reestablish our place as the party of positive solutions.”
